

Analyzing Author's Voice

Voice refers to the way an author uses language to write about his or her subject. In the case of an autobiography, it provides the reader with insights into the personality of the author.

As you read Benjamin Franklin's autobiography, think about what his voice tells you about his personality. Think about how a different kind of man might have described his arrival to a new city.

Directions: Answer the following questions in complete sentences. Provide examples from the text to support your answers.

1. Would you describe Franklin's voice as matter-of-fact or ornate? Give two examples to support your answer.
2. Given that it was written more than 200 years ago, is Franklin's autobiography difficult or easy to understand? Provide specific examples to support your answer.
3. From this passage, does Franklin come across as a modest or an arrogant man? Support your answer with at least one example from the text.
4. What does Franklin do during the Quakers' meeting?

What do you think the last sentence of this selection reveals about Franklin?

5. Would you have wanted to travel with Franklin? Why or why not?